BRAINS WANTED

Every year the need of education is more apparent. What would suffice a quarter of a century ago is entirely inadequate now. But the demand is not for education alone, it is for brains. Thousands of men and women have received several years "book learning," but their accumulated masses of dead languages and smattering of "ologies" is of little service to them as a means of securing remunerative employment. What the world wants is young men and women trained "to do things."

As an evidence of this demand, take the record of our Employment Bureau, which shows that for the past three years we have been utterly unable to supply the calls which have been received for office help. All those who have graduated from this school have been placed in excellent situations, in many cases, from three to six former students are now working for a single firm. A large number have entered the Civil service, and still others have gone to other states. Why don't you get in line with the procession of "Success Winners?" Ask us how. Catalog free.
